

NEWS RELEASE

MICRONCLEAN BECOMES A GMP CERTIFIED BUSINESS

Micronclean are pleased to announce that we have become the first and only cleanroom laundry in the UK to be GMP certified to the Codex Alimentarius. This stands alongside our existing certifications, such as our EN 14065 (RABC) contamination control certification. As a result we can show a clear commitment to providing a market leading cleanroom laundry service which is appropriate to our customer's needs and is backed by independent verification.

As a company Micronclean is committed to delivering a market leading Class 4 cleanroom laundry service to our customers. As part of this we understand the need to gain outside certification as a means, not only to prove our internal processes, but also as a way for our customer base to have complete confidence in our capabilities. Our new GMP certification can then be used alongside our existing certifications, to underpin our customers accreditations.

Currently our unique GMP certification is limited to our existing Class 4 cleanroom laundry at Skegness and is certified under the GMP Codex Alimentarius with the scope of a "Cleanroom Laundry supplying the Pharmaceutical sector". However, over time Micronclean will look to extend this to other parts of our business.

Micronclean's Group Product Manager for Cleanroom Textiles, Stella Yates, commented:

"As a company we are delighted to be the first cleanroom laundry in the UK to obtain GMP certification. As a company we are committed to changing the shape of the markets we serve and this new certification proves that we are listening to our customer base, who not only demand a market leading service but that this is also independently certified".
